At the end of a long day, there's nothing like resting and recharging in a cozy bedroom. It should be your personal retreat, outfitted with the right furnishings and decor to set you up for a good night's rest. Picking the perfect paint color matters, too (feel free to go moody or try light neutrals for an airy vibe).

If you've been struggling to refresh your space, designers say there are simple ways to make your bedroom look more expensive. From choosing high-quality bedding to incorporating vintage finds, here are their best tips and tricks. You can put them to the test even if your bedroom is small.

Layer Textures and Fabrics

Combining materials is always a good idea in the bedroom, be it a throw draped across an upholstered bench or your bedding choices.

"An expensive look is all about depth. Mix crisp cotton sheets with a quilted coverlet, a linen duvet, velvet or silk throw pillows, and a chunky knit or cashmere throw. The layered effect feels plush and hotel-like, instantly elevating the space," says Olivia Botrie of Dart Studio.
